A Room of One’s Own and Woolf’s Short Fiction
Using Virginia Woolf’s Mrs. Dalloway’s Party and A Room of One’s Own, we will examine the ways in which the author's fiction and non-fiction texts insert a voice for feminism, equality, and intellectualism into the predominantly masculine, male-dominated Modernist movement. Our exploration will begin with A Room of One’s Own, examining the ways in which social context, particularly as it filters through the lens of gender construction, influences Woolf’s merging of the creative, the intellectual, and the pragmatic. We will then venture into Mrs. Dalloway’s Party, investigating its use of style and formal innovation as examples of Woolf’s groundbreaking initiatives to make the voices, and stories, of women heard amidst the upheaval of a post-WWI society.

Poetry: Peter Murphy (FH 206)

The Poetry of Edna St. Vincent Millay
We will read the poetry of Edna St. Vincent Millay, beginning with her first collection, Renascence, and reading at least a couple from each collection included in the assigned volume. Particular emphasis will be on Millay’s sonnets, but we will read a breadth of her poems spanning her publications beginning in 1917 and including poems from each of her collections through to Mine the Harvest, published in 1954.
